Travel Warning

The University of Arizona has been made aware of a warning on travel along the Mexican Border due to an unstable criminal situation. The warning dated January 26, 2005, and distributed by the U.S. Department of State indicates, “U.S. citizens should be aware of the risk posed by the deteriorating security situation.” The public announcement will expire on April 25, 2005.

“Violent Criminal activity along the U.S.-Mexico Border has increased as a product of a war between criminal organizations struggling for control of the lucrative narcotics trade along the border.”

The UAPD and the University of Arizona Dean of Students Office would like to warn students and staff of the potential dangers involved in travel along the indicated area. Visiting the U.S. State Department website at www.state.gov or contacting your U.S. consulate before you travel is suggested.

If you have questions on travel safety please contact the UAPD crime prevention office for information at 621-4219.
